On any given night, Capital Centre resounds with the thump of basketballs, the clash of hockey sticks, or the beating of big-name entertainment. And that only scratches the surface in terms of events held at the facility. But what spectators may not know is that Capital Centre is far more than just a great place to watch a game, a show, or a concert; it's also the nerve center for a fast-growing and far-flung conglomerate that handle everything from management of other facilities to computerized ticketing throughout the Eastern Region. Capital Centre just may be the most diversified operation of its kind in America.

The umbrella under which the various entities operate is known as Centre Group Limited Partnership, which evolved from existing company operations. "The old structures we had simply weren't efficient any longer," explained Centre Group chairman Abe Pollin. "With the expansion we went through, we had to reorganize. It was a question of putting people in the proper places and doing things in a more logical and efficient fashion."

Centre Group has five primary divisions: Centre Management, Centre Sales, Ticketron, the Washington Bullets and the Washington Capitals. The biggest and most diverse branch is Centre Management, which operates Capital Centre and other facilities, serves as a design consultant to other arenas, and promotes events here and elsewhere. It also handles various marketing, advertising and public relations duties.

Centre Management currently manages the Capital Centre, George Mason University Patriot Center, Baltimore Arena, Springfield Civic Center and Symphony Hall in Springfield, Mass., and the Gampel Pavilion on the campus of The University of Connecticut in Storrs. Consulting projects currently include Bradeis University in Waltham, Mass., the University of Maryland, the Knott-ARCC facility on the campus of Mount Saint Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md., the Macon Coliseum in Macon, Ga., the Hong Kong Coliseum in Hong Kong, and the development of a new arena on the campus of North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

The Centre Group workforce has grown dramatically in the past five years, now running about 300 full-timers and 1,000 part-timers. Many of these employees are housed in a $5 million headquarters building adjacent to Capital Centre.

Abe Pollin

Chairman of the Board

Back in 1988, Washington Bullets owner Abe Pollin made a speech to 55 fifth grade students at Seat Pleasant Elementary School in Seat Pleasant, Md. He told the students that, "When you are ready to go to college, there will be funds to pay your tuition. The only condition is that you graduate from high school and are accepted by a college."

Following that speech, Pollin, along with lifelong friend Melvin Cohen, established a $325,000 fund so that when the time comes, every one of those 55 children will have the opportunity to attend the college of their choice.

Meet Abe Pollin. He's an individual who has made his fortune through shrewd construction ventures, professional sports teams and the entertainment business. What separates Abe Pollin from most wealthy businessmen, is that he feels this passionate need to give much of his wealth and time back to the community.

"I feel very strongly that those of us who have had success in life, both financially and personally, owe the community," says Pollin. It's critical that those of us in sports give back to the community more than we take out."

For Pollin success has always been a means to an end, with the end being the assistance of others in need. His philanthrophy and humanitarian endeavors have become legendary, ranging from aid for the disabled to relief efforts for the hungry and drought-stricken overseas. For his selfless contributions and civic activities, he has won countless awards, including Washingtonian Magazine's Man of the Year in 1973. He captured similar honors from the Hebrew Academy in 1976 and Washington television station WJLA in 1985. In 1988, he was named the recipient of the Golden Links Award by the Washington Board of Trade.

Turning from the humanitarian to the businessman, Abe Pollin certainly could have rested on his laurels long ago. Already a giant in Washington area sports, entertainment and philanthropic circles, there seemed no worlds left for him to conquer. So what did he do? Pollin did the only thing he knows how to do—he kept pressing forward, making his business more diverse, sophisticated and responsive to its patrons than ever before. Abe Pollin, you see, doesn't know how to sit still. He can't go half-throttle. "An organization of our size really can't afford to," says the chairman of Centre Group Limited Partnership. "You either go up or down; if you sit still, you stagnate."

The most recent manifestation of this philosophy is the reorganization of his Capital Centre-based operations. To accommodate their expansion, Pollin created Centre Group, a corporate umbrella that enables its five component parts to operate as efficiently as possible. The burgeoning operation now handles everything from advertising to computerized ticketing to the design and management of other arenas. And don't forget the Washington Bullets and the Washington Capitals, the two best-known divisions of Centre Group.

Since it opened in 1973, Capital Centre under Pollin has grown from a state-of-the-art arena (which it still is) into a veritable marketplace for expertise in the sports/entertainment field.

Born and raised in Philadelphia, he first learned the value of a hard day's work as a young morning laborer for his father's plumbing/contracting business. Following his graduation from George Washington University in 1945, Pollin continued working for the family business, and then formed his own contracting firm in 1957. He made a name for himself as a builder of award-winning structures throughout the Washington area.

"I've been a sports nut all my life," said Pollin, who played sandlot ball as a kid and always dreamt of owning a professional franchise. In 1964, the ownership opportunity presented itself, "and I grabbed it," he said. Pollin and two partners purchased the NBA Baltimore Bullets for a then-record of $1.1 million. He became the team's sole owner, and is now the longest-tenured owner in the NBA. In 1972, he beat Jimmy the Greek's 600-to-1 odds—not to mention 11 other qualified applicants—and secured an NHL expansion franchise, later to be named the Capitals.

He moved the Bullets to the Washington area in 1973. Pollin had intended to be a tenant in somebody else's arena, but when that fell through, he decided to build his own. But not just any arena. "As long as we were building a building in the nation's capital, it had to be one of the best in the world," he said. Capital Centre was designed with impeccable sight lines and it came equipped with the first large, luxury skyboxes in America, the Sky Suites. Another innovation was Telscreen, a giant four-sided screen suspended high above the arena floor on which fans could see television-quality instant replays and other features. The brand-new Capital Centre was also the first arena in America with fully computerized ticketing.

But before the building opened its doors, Pollin sent some of his people to Disneyworld to study that operation. Why? "Because in our opinion," explained Pollin, "Disney treats its patrons and employees better than any other organization in the world."

Capital Centre, which cost $18 million to construct, was finished in 15 months, a remarkably short period considering legal wrangling, bad weather and other impediments that threatened to delay the project. The facility opened December 2, 1973. In its inaugural event, a sellout crowd of 19,035 watched the Bullets beat the Seattle SuperSonics 98-96. Since then, more than 40 million customers of all ages have watched not only basketball and hockey, but shows, concerts, truck and tractor pulls and countless other spectacles.

As for Pollin, his biggest thrills as a sportsman have been the Bullets' 1978 NBA World Championship and the emergence of the Capitals as a major player in the NHL.

Pollin lives in Bethesda with his wife, Irene, a psychotherapist. They are avid travelers, and Pollin also enjoys playing tennis. Their elder son, Robert, and his wife, Sigrid, live in Riverside, Calif., with their daughters, Emma Linda and Hanna Martha. Their younger son, Jim, lives in New York City.

Did You Know . . .

Abe Pollin is the longest tenured owner in the NBA, now beginning his 27th season in the league.

Jerry Sachs

Vice Chairman

Jerry Sachs freely admits he gets paid to do what others would gladly do gratis—day in and day out watch the world's best athletes and entertainers perform at Capital Centre.

"If you enjoy that kind of thing," he said, "it's the best job in the world. Who else gets paid to come to events?"

Actually, it's not quite that simple. If Abe Pollin is Capital Centre's commander-in-chief, Sachs is the day-to-day field general, or as he's known around the arena, "the nuts-and-bolts guy." His position as president of Centre Group Limited Partnership has its perks, but it also carries enormous responsibility.

That was never more evident than on Super Bowl Sunday 1985, when Sachs received a 10 a.m. call from the White House informing him that frigid temperatures might force the next day's inaugural parade inside. Within 12 hours of the decision to move indoors, Sachs mobilized his scattered workforce and completely converted Capital Centre from a hockey rink to a presidential venue. It was a quick change even for a quick-change artist like Sachs.

"It was a wild and exciting scene," recalled a smiling Sachs, resplendent in red, white and blue suspenders. "I'll never forget watching this all occur and being excited about being the focal point of the world at that particular moment and knowing what our people had done to make it happen."

Sachs, however, gets his satisfaction in other ways too. Like his longtime friend and associate Pollin, he's deeply involved in charities and other humanitarian efforts. Sachs has been fighting drunk driving for years—ever since a radio editorial on the subject caught his attention. "It hit a chord in my mind," he said, "and I thought this was something I could get involved in and make a difference." Indeed he has, spearheading several widely acclaimed efforts to increase alcohol awareness. The Capital Centre program, known as TEAM (Techniques for Effective Alcohol Management) is one. TEAM has been embraced by the NBA, CBS and the National Highway Traffic/Safety Administration, among others. Locally, Sachs founded the Washington Regional Alcohol Program (WRAP) and he sat on the national board of MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving).

But he's also involved in less structured efforts to help others and return some of his good fortune to the community. For the past five years, Sachs and his family have spent Christmas and Thanksgiving feeding the poor, the hungry and the homeless at local soup kitchens. "I think it almost does more for us than the people being fed," he said. "It's an opportunity to renew our touch with the problems of humanity."

Meanwhile, the Baltimore native continues to devote time, energy and money to the Lancers Boys' Club in his old hometown. He was once a member, so Sachs knows of what he speaks when he calls the Lancers "the salvation of thousands of kids in Baltimore." A former U.S. Marine, Sachs attended Dartmouth College, where he played lacrosse, and received his bachelor's degree in history from Western Reserve University in 1960.

That same year he got his professional start, working in public relations for the Baltimore Orioles. In 1963, he was named the Orioles public relations director, and two years after that, he headed south to manage public relations, marketing and advertising for the Atlanta Braves. Sachs was then hired by the Atlanta-based Coca-Cola Company, where he became the first person in that firm's history to hold the position of Coordinator of Sports Activities. In this capacity, he formed the Neighborhood Basketball League, a summer program for inner-city youths which won him generous accolades.

Sachs returned to Baltimore in 1970 when he became the Bullets general manager. It was an auspicious homecoming; that year the team went on to the NBA Championship series. When the team later moved to the Washington area, so did Sachs, who was instrumental in making it a smooth transition. He was named president of Capital Centre when the building first opened its doors in 1973. That was almost 40 million customers ago.

Sachs and his wife, Joyce, live in Bethesda, Md. Their son, Gene, is a principal in a commercial real estate firm in Washington, D.C. Their daughter, Barbara, is a special events coordinator for a local department store chain.

Susan O'Malley

Executive Vice President

"Service, service, service."

These are the top three things that Susan O'Malley preaches as the most important components of a winning team off the court. As O'Malley directs a front office force of 50 Bullets employees, each is trained that service is what drives her Bullets team.

"We're in the entertainment business," says the 29-year-old O'Malley. "Each night it is our job to entertain our clients. It doesn't take a marketing genius to figure out that if you treat these people well, show them a good time and take care of them, they will most likely come back for a repeat performance."

O'Malley's philosophy isn't anything new. What she has done is gone back to basics. Her goal is to treat everyone who comes into the Capital Centre or the Baltimore Arena as if they were guests in her home.

And, Bullets owner Abe Pollin did not have to look any further than his own home at the Capital Centre to find the right person to rebuild the Bullets front office. In October of 1988, O'Malley left her post as director of marketing with the Bullets and accepted Pollin's challenge to help manage his rebuilding mission.

As executive vice president, Susan O'Malley is responsible for all off-court activities of the Bullets franchise. These duties include overseeing the marketing, sponsorships, ticket sales, advertising, accounting, public relations and community relations of the organization.

Under O'Malley's guidance after just her first season in 1988–89, the Bullets recognized the largest ticket revenue year in the history of the franchise. In addition, that season the club achieved the highest renewal rate of season tickets ever by a Bullets franchise, which includes the year following the 1977–78 Championship season. At the conclusion of the 1989–90 season, the NBA released a report which ranked those teams that had the highest increase in attendance for the season. On top of the NBA was O'Malley's Bullets with a 36% increase in attendance over the previous season.

In sponsorships, O'Malley and her team have generated the largest amount of sponsorship dollars ever by the Bullets. Recently, O'Malley and the Bullets notched a $2,000,000 courtside signage deal, twice as large as any other previous Bullets contract. Soon after, the tireless O'Malley sealed a deal with Washington, D.C., radio mega-station WTOP to serve as the flagship station of Bullets radio broadcasts for the next three seasons. She also worked out a deal with Baltimore's 50,000-watt, radio station WBAL to carry a portion of the Bullet's schedule for the 1990–91 season.

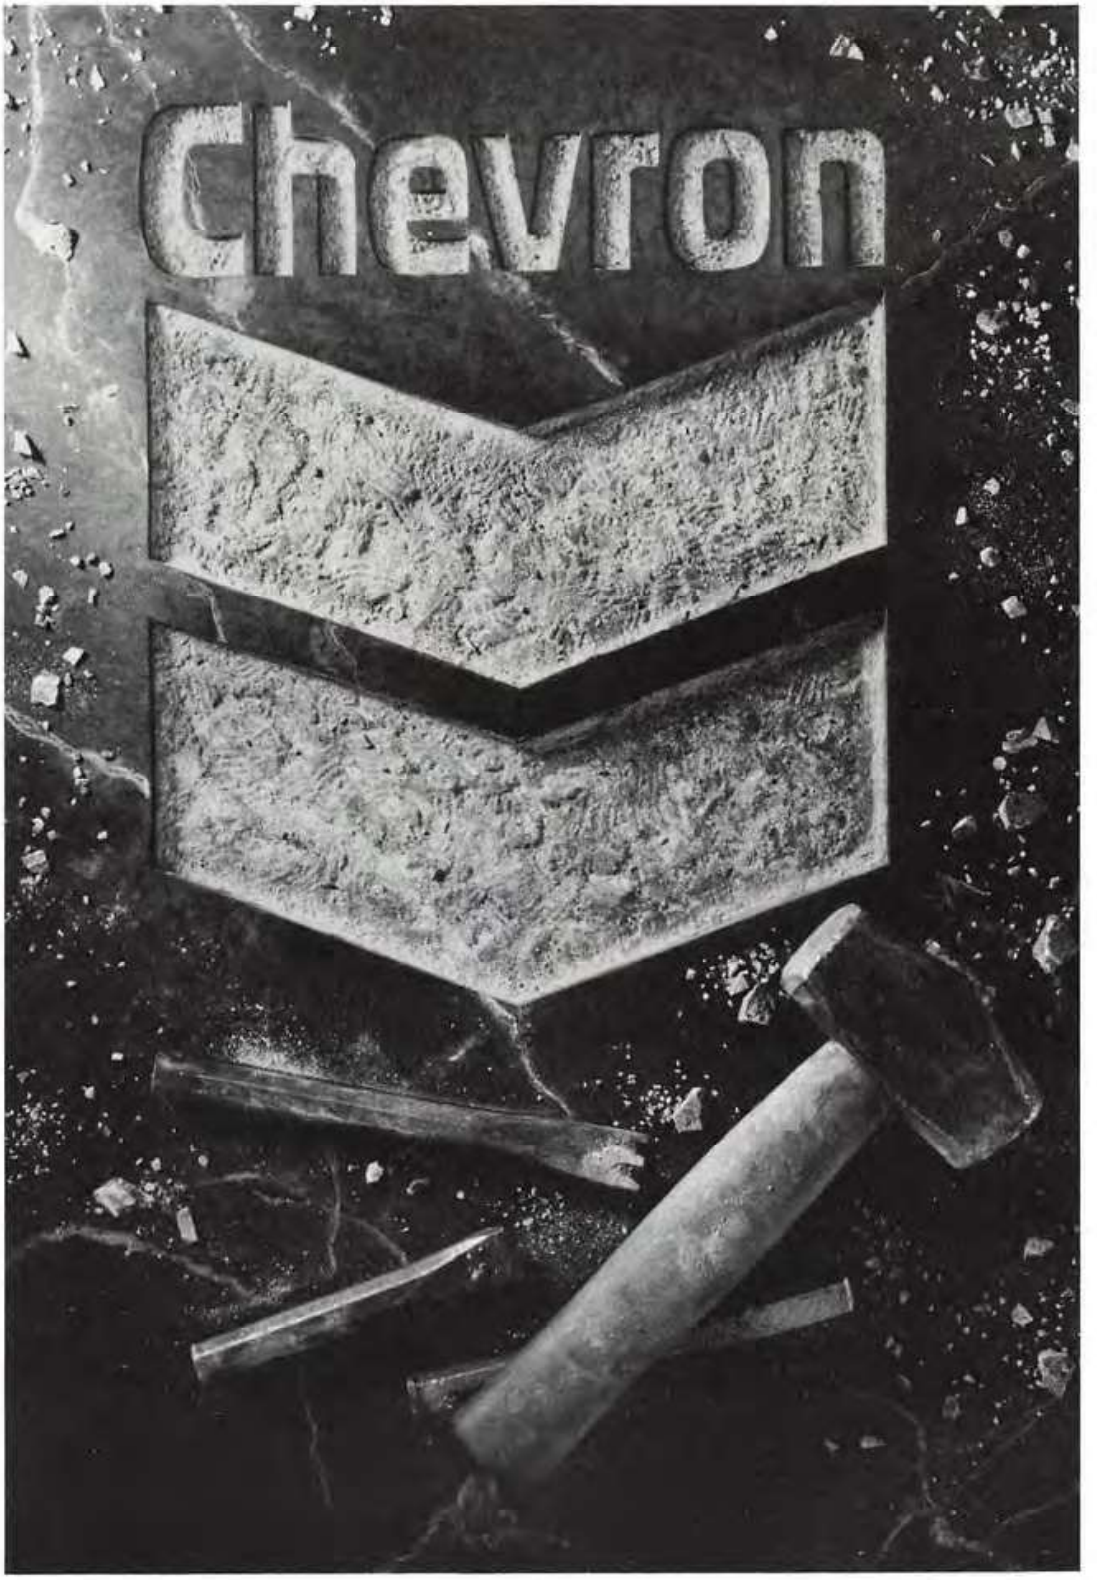
And finally, the Bullets involvement in the community and with charity groups over the last two seasons have never been matched in past years. O'Malley, leading her group by example, served on the Board of Directors for the Kennedy Institute and is currently a member of the Board of Directors for Easter Seals.

A 1983 graduate of Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Maryland, O'Malley earned a bachelor of science degree in business and finance. Prior to joining the Bullets, O'Malley worked for the Earle Palmer Brown advertising firm for three years.

O'Malley joined the Bullets organization during the 1986–87 season as the director of advertising. Her duties included the development of new advertising campaigns, as well as placement and exposure of existing campaigns.

As executive vice president, O'Malley has instilled in her staff the philosophy of being "proactive" rather than "reactive" towards clients, the community and the media. "We don't have the luxury of sitting back and watching our arena fill up night in and night out like a lot of teams do," explains O'Malley. "We have to get out there and create an excitement about Bullets basketball, create opportunities to enhance our image in the community and to provide the highest quality service and personal touch that an organization can provide."

Susan, a native of Clinton (MD), is single and now resides in Howard County.



Quality makes a lasting impression.

John Nash

Vice President/General Manager

When Bullets owner Abe Pollin selected John Nash as the team's new general manager in June replacing 17-year veteran Bob Ferry, Bullets fans were hoping that some of the magic that Nash worked with the Philadelphia 76ers would follow him to Washington.

And after just one week on the job, Nash proved that he still had some power left in his magic wand, completing one of the biggest trades in Bullets history acquiring 1989's number one overall draft selection Pervis Ellison for seven-year veteran Jeff Malone. Nash became an instant success with Bullets followers.

John Nash is quickly making a name for himself in this league of general manager giants. Known as a hands-on executive, Nash was heavily involved in the 76ers scouting of prospective NBA players, working several trades in recent history. He acquired starters Johnny Dawkins, Hersey Hawkins, Mike Gminski and Rick Mahorn, along with key reserves Ron Anderson and Derek Smith. And the gamble paid off as the club improved from 36 to 53 victories in just two seasons, with the 1989–90 team winning the Atlantic Division and advancing to the semi-finals of the NBA playoffs.

But his achievements began during his stint as assistant general manager, when he worked closely with team owner Harold Katz in the move that sent Daryl Dawkins to New Jersey in 1982. Just two weeks later, they secured Moses Malone from Houston. Both moves would restructure the team that would eventually win the 1983 World Championship.

His accomplishments have made his peers sit up and take notice, as last season, he finished third in the balloting for The Sporting News Executive of the Year, a prestigious award voted on annually by the teams' personnel.

The 43-year-old Philadelphia area native was known as a "full service" general manager with the Sixers, handling both the business and basketball aspects of the club. His responsibilities included overseeing marketing, ticket sales, and radio and television broadcasts. He had joined the club in 1981 as business manager and assistant general manager, and stepped into the top position when GM Pat Williams resigned to take a similar position with the expansion Orlando Magic in 1986. In his last season, Nash's off-court duties increased and his dual role was one reason he left the 76ers.

"I felt that we had come a long way in Philadelphia over the last couple of years," said Nash. "As my responsibilities off the court increased with the 76ers, I felt it was the right time to make a move in another direction."

Nash had been in much demand after his resignation. He had been approached by NBC to assist in its telecast of NBA games next season and had spoken with the Denver Nuggets about their general manager position.

The timing couldn't have been better for the Bullets, and one week after Ferry resigned his post, Pollin selected Nash as his new general manager.

"I spoke to many people in the NBA, and everyone held John Nash in high regard," said the Bullets highly-regarded owner. "I talked to other people (about the position), but I usually go with my gut feeling, and after spending several hours with John, my gut said, "This is my man.'"

Nash developed extensive basketball experience during his six-year stint (1975–81) as the executive director of the Big Five, an association of five major colleges in Philadelphia. His primary role was to coordinate the schedules for marketing and television purposes and to administer and promote college basketball for the five schools (LaSalle, Penn, St. Joseph's, Temple, Villanova).

It was there that he made his first contacts with future NBA coaches such as Chuck Daly, then coaching at Penn; Jim Lynam, coach at St. Joseph's; Paul Westhead, coach at LaSalle; and Don Casey, coach at Temple. Nash said these contacts made his progression into the NBA a natural.

Nash and his wife, Ann, have six children: Andrea, 22, Elizabeth, 20, Meridyth, 19, Carolyn, 17, Brian, 11, and Barbara, 8.

Wes Unseld

Head Coach & Vice President

When asked about the difference in the NBA today compared to his era, Wes Unseld often chuckles.

"Today, it's show biz," says the Hall of Famer. "If we would have acted like some of these guys do today, we would have been called a flake. Today the players are personalities."

In a story that Unseld relayed to Dave Kindred, The National sports writer who was writing a feature on Wes for Washingtonian Magazine (January 1990), the Bullets coach said, "to think you'd kiss somebody on the court . . . yeah, Gus Johnson going out and kissin' Dave DeBusschere . . . or me kissin' Willis Reed . . . I just don't think Willis would be allowed back in the state of Louisiana. And I wouldn't go back to Kentucky, not my neighborhood . . . it was a no-nonsense style back then."

Unseld was a no-nonsense player and is a no-nonsense coach. As a player he built an image for himself as someone who would do whatever it took to win. As a player he loved training camp and approached competition in camp as he would the seventh game of the NBA Championship.

Unseld claims to know nothing about coaching basketball. What he does know about is hard work, dedication, and most of all, winning. It is these attributes that Unseld possesses that has gained him the respect of his team and the NBA as a coach.

"There is no doubt about it," says Bullets forward Bernard King. "This team wants to play hard for Wes. We have a great deal of respect and admiration for him as a person and for when he was a player. If anything, he stamped his personality on this ball club."

Bullets owner Abe Pollin and Wes Unseld have had a special kind of relationship since the center from Louisville joined the Bullets in 1968. In 1981 on the heels of Unseld's retirement from his playing career, Pollin made one of his brightest business decisions. He asked the future Hall of Famer to stay with the organization as a front office executive. Pollin felt that Unseld's winning ways would be a positive force in the day-to-day operation of the front office and appointed Unseld vice president.

As an executive, Unseld devoted a majority of his time to making special appearances and became a popular and prolific speaker. In addition, he coordinated the Bullets Baltimore office, worked as a color analyst for Bullets telecasts and was involved in broadcast development, sponsorships and community relations.

Prior to the 1987–88 season, Bullets head coach Kevin Loughery convinced Unseld to give up his executive duties and to join him on the bench as an assistant coach. Just 27 games into the season with a record of 8–19, Pollin released Loughery of his coaching duties and asked his friend Unseld to be his head coach. Under his leadership, Unseld's Bullets went 30–25 during the remainder of the regular season, and forced a fifth and deciding game against Eastern Conference Champion Detroit in the first round of the 1988 playoffs.

The 6'7" Unseld, who was best known for his bone-jarring picks and fullcourt outlet passes, was chosen by the Bullets on the first round of the 1968 NBA draft. He was the second player selected overall in the draft, behind another Bullets great Elvin Hayes, after twice earning all-America honors at the University of Louisville.

He was an instant success. In his initial NBA season, Unseld was chosen both Rookie-of-the-Year and the League's Most Valuable Player. He and Wilt Chamberlain are the only men ever to have been the recipients of both awards in the same season. Unseld also was selected to play in the NBA All-Star game that season, his first of five appearances. The Bullets did well, too, improving their record from 36–46 the previous year to 57–25 with Wes.

The Bullets, who had never experienced a winning season before he arrived, recorded 10 plus .500 seasons when Wes was a member of the team. Unseld was a major force in sending the Bullets to 12 consecutive playoff appearances. He was voted the Most Valuable Player of the 1978 NBA Championship Series that brought Washington its first sports title in 36 years.

In his 13-year NBA career, Unseld achieved numerous accomplishments. He ranks seventh all-time in rebounding, is one of a handful of players who have scored 10,000 points and pulled down 10,000 rebounds; ranks third all-time among playoff leaders in rebounds; and is the Bullets all-time leader in games played, rebounds, minutes played and assists.

"This team wants to play hard for Wes," said Bullets forward Bernard King. "We have a great deal of admiration for him as a person and as a player. He stamped his personality on this ball club."

Although he is a man who doesn't discuss such things, Unseld's achievements off the court are monumental, as well. In 1988, he was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility. In 1975, he was the first recipient of the Walter Kennedy Citizenship Award, which is given annually to the NBA player or coach making the greatest civic contribution to his community. Unseld, who is a past vice president of the NBA Players Association, continues to volunteer his time in many community projects throughout the Washington and Baltimore area.

Much of Unseld's spare time is devoted to assisting his wife Connie, a member of the University of Maryland Board of Regents, at the Unselds' School in Baltimore.

Wes, Connie and their children, Kimberly (17) and Westly (15), reside in Baltimore, Maryland.

Bill Blair
Assistant Coach

One of the top defensive coaches in the league, Bill Blair begins his fifth season as an assistant coach with the Bullets. He came to the organization in 1986 with Kevin Loughery when he took over head coaching duties midway through the 1987–88 season.

Prior to joining the Bullets, Blair spent one season as an assistant coach and scout for the Indiana Pacers. From 1983–85, he served as an assistant under Loughery in Chicago. The Bulls 1984–85 season was Chicago's first winning season in five years and their effort earned them a playoff berth. Blair also worked for the New Jersey Nets as an assistant under Larry Brown from 1981–83, while the team earned playoff berths both seasons.

A native of Whitesburg, Kentucky, Blair attended Randolph-Macon Academy in Front Royal, Virginia, and Virginia Military Institute. He captained the Keydets his senior season while earning all-conference honors and leading the team into the NCAA tournament.

Blair was named coach of his alma mater in 1972 and in 1975 led VMI to a 22-10 record, their first winning record in 32 years. For his accomplishments, he was named District III Coach of the Year after guiding VMI to one of the final eight teams in the country. In 1976, Blair became head coach at the University of Colorado and guided the Buffalos to three straight winning seasons from 1978–80. In 1980, he was named coach for the Olympic Trials.

Blair and his wife Kathie have two daughters, Christine (22) and Candace (18). They reside in Gambrills, Maryland.

Jeff Bzdelik
Assistant Coach

When Wes Unseld needed an assistant coach with his same hard work ethic, he needed only to look in his own backyard to Jeff Bzdelik, then head coach at the University of Maryland Baltimore County (UMBC). He joined the Bullets coaching staff on April 12, 1988. A coach for eight years at the collegiate level, Bzdelik is known for his motivational and teaching techniques among his peers.

The 37-year-old Bzdelik compiled a 26-30 record in two seasons at UMBC. Following his first season with the Retrievers, he was honored by many college basketball publications with having one of "college basketball's biggest turnarounds of the year," while playing basketball powers Ohio State, Georgetown and N.C. State.

Prior to his association with UMBC, Bzdelik served as the assistant coach at Northwestern University from 1980–86. He was responsible for two recruiting classes that were ranked top 20 in the nation. The Wildcats also recorded their best season ever and the university made its only post-season appearance during his tenure. From 1978–80, Bzdelik was an assistant coach at Davidson College in Davidson, N.C.

Bzdelik, a 1976 graduate of the University of Illinois-Chicago, was named MVP of the UIC basketball team and finished his career as the Flames 15th all-time scoring leader. During the summer of 1977, he toured the Dominican Republic playing basketball and conducting clinics. He conducts basketball clinics year-round for the Tastykake Jr. Bullets program and area youth programs. He also served as a member of the United States Army Reserve for six years.

Bzdelik resides in Crofton, Md., with his wife Nina, and their two-year-old son, Brett.

John Lally
Trainer

John Lally is in his 14th full season as the Bullets trainer, having joined the team in 1976. A native of Texas, Lally began his training career as a student assistant at Texas Christian University. He trained in the Chicago Cubs organization from 1965 to 1968 and then joined the Dallas Chaparrals of the American Basketball Association.

After the 1972 season with the Chaparrals, Lally spent two years in private business before he returned to the ABA as trainer for the Memphis Sounds and Baltimore Claws.

This past summer, Lally was selected as the trainer for the United States Men's basketball team at the Goodwill Games in Seattle.

The Bullets veteran trainer is a member of the National Athletic Trainers Association, the National Strength and Conditioning Association and the National Basketball Trainers Association.

Lally resides in Bowie, Maryland. He has a daughter, Lauren (12).

Front Office Staff

Rhonda Ballute
Director of Customer Service

Rhonda Ballute, in her 10th season with the Bullets, heads the team's customer service operation. Ballute, who started her Bullets career as an intern and part-time sales representative, began her customer service work in 1983 when she was promoted to season ticket coordinator.

Under Ballute's leadership, and with the support of David Lanzi's sales staff, the Bullets achieved a record 90% renewal rate of season ticket holders for the 1989–90 season. One of her most notable projects has been the implementation of a season ticket holder's "Hall of Fans" program, which recognizes those fans who have shown dedication to the Bullets for many years.

Ballute also created a manual database of season ticket holders which assists her office in their "proactive" approach. Birthdays, concert interests, and other personal notes on accounts are stored on computer so that her staff can give the personal touch to their clients.

Rhonda, and her husband, Eddie, have a daughter, Amanda (5) and they reside in Bowie, Maryland.

David Lanzi
General Sales Manager

Dave Lanzi has served as the Bullets general sales manager since November 1988. His efforts during the 1989–90 season produced the largest sales season in the history of the Bullets franchise and broke all past Bullets season ticket renewal rates. He has implemented and trained an aggressive new sales force for both the Washington and Baltimore offices.

During his first season with the Bullets, Lanzi computerized commission statements and mailing lists for the sales office. He implemented territories for his sales force to more effectively penetrate the market.

Prior to joining the Bullets, Lanzi worked his way up the sales ladder at Sears Roebuck, Inc. He advanced from sales representative to marketing manager to account manager before serving as branch manager for three years with Sears.

Dave, a finance graduate from the University of Maryland, and his wife, Susan, reside in Crofton, Md., with their three children, Adrienne (4), and twins Alexandra (2) and Brittany (2).

Muth's responsibilities as the Bullets controller are to oversee all financial transactions of the team, including payroll, accounts receivable, accounts payable, the general ledger and financial statements.

Prior to April 1988, she served as accounting manager for Avelex, an electronics research and development company. One of Avelex's primary projects was the research and development of a video telecommunications system.

Living in Oakland, California, Muth held the position of account manager for Acme Galvanizing Company from May 1985 to November 1987.

Kathy resides in Laurel, Maryland.

A 1987 graduate of the University of North Carolina, Stadler began his Bullets career as an intern in the summer of 87. Following graduation, he was hired as a customer service representative and then promoted to marketing manager eight months later. Because of his work overseeing the creative direction of the Bullets campaign and the publication of support material, Stadler was promoted to director of advertising in December 1989.

Stadler also plans and directs the Wes Unseld Adult Fantasy Basketball Camp, the only camp of its kind in the NBA. Last September at the NBA meetings, Stadler was asked to make a presentation to the 26 teams on the Fantasy Camp.

Prior to joining the Bullets, he worked in various capacities during his five-year reign at the University of Maryland Baltimore County (UMBC). Rick served as the university's sports information director for three years and assumed the duties of assistant athletic director for marketing and promotions during 1986–87. He was promoted to associate athletic director in 1987 and doubled that season as assistant basketball coach under then head coach Jeff Bzdelik, who now serves as a Bullets assistant coach.

At 6'7", Moreland played basketball for UMBC as an undergraduate where he currently holds many of the school's scoring and rebounding records. In 1983, he was drafted by the Bullets.

Moreland, a 1983 Broadcasting/Media graduate at UMBC, is completing his Masters Degree in public relations at the University of Maryland.

Rick and his wife, Susan, reside in Crofton, Maryland, with their three children, Ricky (4), Ryan (3) and Alexandra (1).

Judy Holland
Director of Community Relations

Judy Holland enters her third full season as the director of community relations. Holland has been the cornerstone of the public and community relations departments for the past nine seasons, having served as senior public relations assistant prior to her promotion.

Many community-wide programs have been implemented through Holland's guidance. Last year's Tastykake clinics, conducted by Bullets guard Steve Colter and Assistant Coach Jeff Bzdelik, were coordinated by Holland and were held at eight different locations throughout the District of Columbia school system. The Bullets "Shooting Star" program, which recognizes local humanitarians, evolved from Holland's involvement with community volunteers and leaders. She also is responsible for the largest "Just Read It," rally for literacy with more than 15,000 students from Prince George's County in attendance at the Capital Centre.

After graduation from Hampton Institute in Virginia with a degree in mass media, Holland was a staff writer for the Frederick News and Post.

Judy, a Frederick, Maryland, native, now resides in Mitchellville, Maryland.

Drew Mills
Director of Business Development

Drew Mills, entering his 10th year with the Bullets, is an integral player in the generation of major corporate advertising dollars for the Bullets. Two seasons ago, Mills, along with the corporate sales staff, produced the highest amount of corporate revenue in Bullets history—over one million dollars.

Among his other duties, Mills is responsible for coordinating advertising packages with the Bullets flagship stations WDCA-TV 20 and WTOP AM 1500 radio. The Tastykake Jr. Bullets program, a grass roots youth basketball league that provides organized basketball for over 3,000 inner city youth, was developed by Mills.

Prior to his corporate sponsorship years, Mills served as the director of sales from 1983 to 1985. Under Mills, the Bullets implemented the first partial season ticket plan, a telemarketing system, and created courtside box seats.

Mills, a member of the American Marketing Association (AMA) and the Ad Club of Greater Washington, graduated from James Madison University with a degree in public administration. Drew resides in Gaithersburg, Maryland.

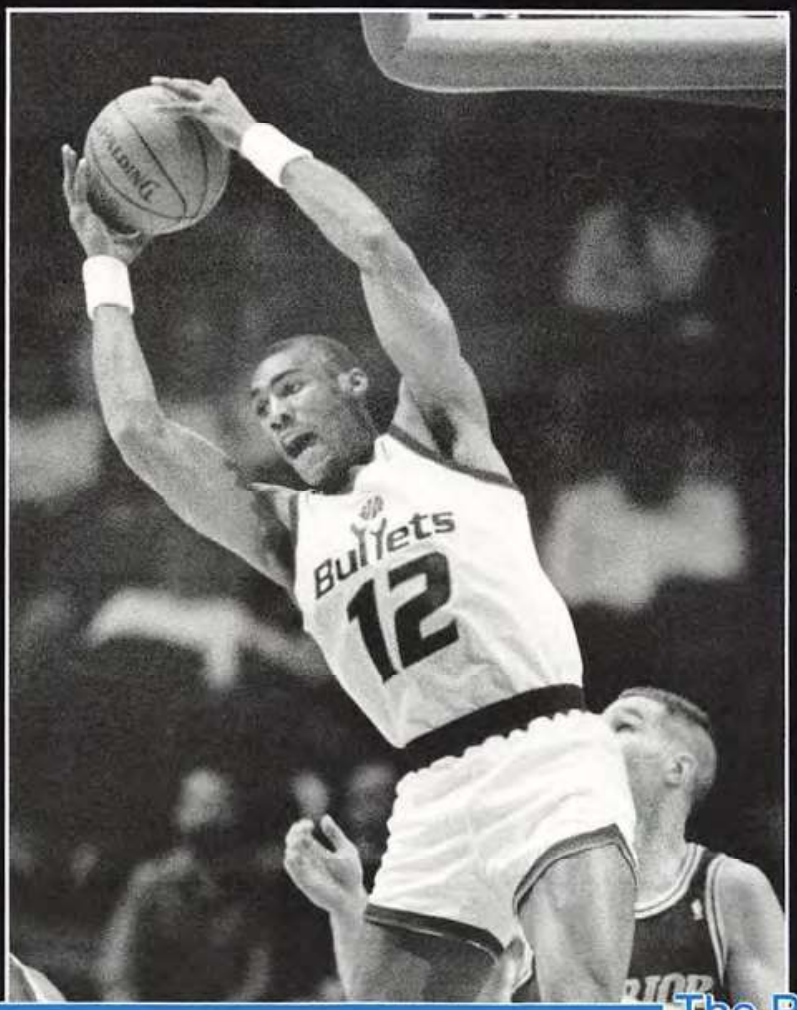
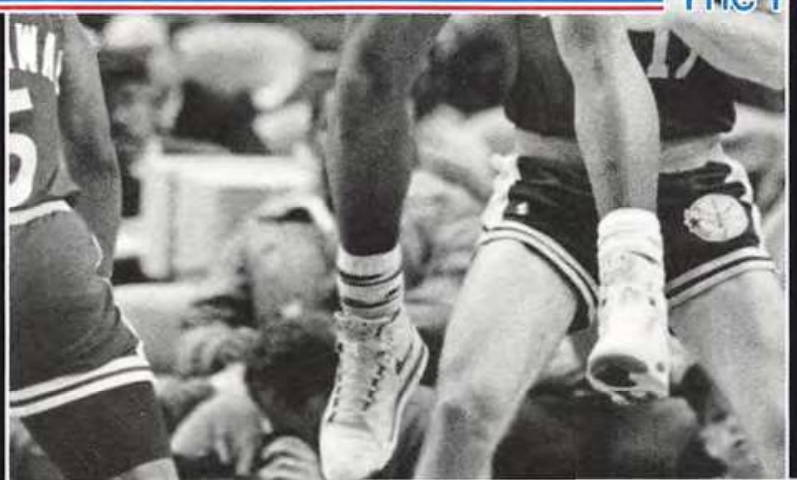
WE'VE GOT A FEW SCORES TO SETTLE!





1990–91 Washington Bullets Outlook
By Wes Unseld

They say that "patience is a virtue." I would tend to agree with this, but in professional sports there isn't much time or interest in being patient. I've never asked my team, the front office or our fans to be patient with the Bullets. They've spent the past two seasons being patient with us and after finishing the 1989–90 season at 31–51, we needed to make drastic changes.

Sure, if John Williams would have stayed healthy and finished the season as he started it (18.2 ppg, 7.6 rpg, 5.7 apg), we might have recorded a .500 record and made the playoffs. But, that's not good enough. Being satisfied with making the playoffs is no satisfaction to me at all. We want to be able to compete with the best, and I'll keep doing this job until I get it right.

I mentioned the need for us to make some drastic moves during the summer and I think we've made them. John Nash, our new general manager, hit the road running when he accepted the post on June 18. Just one week later, we held a press conference to announce that we had acquired the 1989 NBA #1 draft pick center Pervis Ellison from Sacramento.

Although we gave up an integral part of our team, leading scorer Jeff Malone, the move was something we had to do to improve. We were a team that was undersized and lacked an inside scorer and rebounder. Last season, we were beaten virtually every night inside. Charles Jones (2.4 blocks per game) played hard, but was forced to play out of position at center. Pervis has the ability to change that for us.

A player like Pervis will enable us to do a lot of things. When he came out of college, I thought he had more of an upside than any other player available. He can block shots, run the floor and score from the post. I always thought he would be a better player in the pros. Only time will tell.

One of the keys for us this season will be the return of John Williams. John missed 64 games last season because of a severe injury to his right knee. He has the potential to be one of the great ones in this league, and his success in rehabilitation and conditioning will be an important variable in how good we can be this season.

With the departure of Jeff Malone (24.3 ppg), we will need to replace not only his points, but his defense and leadership at the guard spot. Ledell Eackles (13.5 ppg) is a quality two guard, but he's not Jeff Malone. Ledell can be a big scorer in this league, but he has a ways to go to make his game complete. This is a wonderful opportunity for Ledell to step up and show the NBA that he can play with anyone.

I can't say enough about our two ironmen over the past two seasons, Bernard King and Darrell Walker have given their all for the Bullets every time they lace-up the shoes. Bernard King (22.4 ppg) played in all 82 games last season, the first time he has done that since the 1978–79 season with the Nets. I have the utmost respect for Bernard, his approach to the game and his leadership role on this team. Darrell Walker, the NBA's "Allstate Good Hands" Award winner, had an amazing season. As a point guard, he led the team in rebounding (8.8), assists (8.0) and steals (1.72). Darrell played in 81 games last season and averaged 35.6 minutes per game. Veteran guard Steve Colter will once again add experience and quickness to our guard positions.

RINGTHEBELL.ORG on Archive.org

The continued development of our fine small forward core: Mark Alarie (10.5 ppg), Harvey Grant (8.2 ppg) and Tommy Hammonds (5.3 ppg) gives us versatility and depth at that position. Each of these guys made enormous improvements toward the end of last season and should battle for increased playing time this season.

With two second-round picks in last June's draft, we hopefully have added some depth to two key positions. Greg Foster, a center out of Texas-El Paso, could be the big seven-footer that we need. He weighed in at 240 lbs., likes to hit people, and has a soft touch around the basket. For his size, he runs the court well. Albert "A.J." English, a guard from Division II Virginia Union, led the nation in scoring (33.4 ppg) last season and can flat out put it in the hole. I watched him hit for 50 points in a game last year and he should make a serious run for playing time at either guard position.

With some of the moves that we've made over the summer, I think we've pointed ourselves in the right direction to be a strong club. There are still some holes in this team, and you can bet that John Nash and myself won't be "patient" in filling them because this season, we've got a few scores to settle.

Did You Know . . .

The Baltimore Bullets set a record that can be tied, but never broken. The starting five in their game against the Ft. Wayne Pistons played the entire game with no substitutes. This is the only time this has occurred in NBA history. This unusual event took place Feb. 10, 1952, and that team won.

NBA Playoff Format

1. Sixteen teams shall qualify for the playoffs. There shall be eight teams from each conference, consisting of the two division champions and the six other teams in each conference with the best winning percentage during the regular season.
2. The first round of the playoffs shall be a best-of-five series (instead of best-of-three) with all succeeding rounds, including the NBA World Championship Series, being best-of-seven. All teams will participate in the first round; byes that formerly went to division winners have been eliminated.

Following are the playoff pairings:

Note: Team 1 in each conference is the division winner with the better record, Team 2 is the other division winner and Teams 3–8 are ranked according to their regular-season winning percentage.

NBA Playoff Tie-Breaking Procedure

Two-Way Tie

In order to break a tie for playoff positions, if one exists at the close of the regular season, the following criteria will be utilized in the order set forth:

1. Results of games against each other.
2. Better winning percentage within own conference.
3. Better winning percentage within own division (only if tied teams are in the same division).
4. Better winning percentage against playoff opponents in own conference.
5. Point differential in games against each other.
6. Better point differential between offense and defense.

More Than Two Teams Tied

1. Best cumulative winning percentage in total games involving all teams tied.
2. Best winning percentage within own conference.
3. Best winning percentage within own division (only if tied teams are in same division).
4. Best winning percentage against playoff opponents in own conference.
5. Best point differential between offense and defense.

If a multiple team tie is reduced to a two-team tie at any point using the above criteria, the two-team tie will be resolved in accordance with the existing two-team tie procedure.
